shall enter him," he told his host of friends.

Harry Payne Whitney's Enchantment ran straight and true in the Baidwin Purse, and galloped home far ahead of a big field of juveniles. McAtee got him away well and allowed him to follow the pace set by Harry S. Sinclair's Aladdin to the head of the stretch. There McAtee gave Enchantment his head, and he galloped the remainder of the way to win by nearly a sixteenth of a mile.

Buddy Ensor showed that he has jost none of his skill in the final. He made Walter Salmen's Vigil run his best and then put up a finish that was a whirlwind. It was good enough to make Virgil beat Curtis on the post by a neck. Fator rode Curtis, which was on odds on and heavily played favorite, and Ensor ourode him.
